“As a society we are embarrassed by love. We treat it as if it were an obscenity. We reluctantly admit to it. Even saying the word makes us stumble and blush... Love is the most important thing in our lives, a passion for which we would fight or die, and yet we’re reluctant to linger over its names. Without a supple vocabulary, we can’t even talk or think about it directly.”
– Diane Ackerman, via bell hooks, All About Love: New Visions.

New York – Open Sessions 2018–2020: What’s Love Got to Do with It? is an exhibition about love. About the banality of love, but also about its radicality, the labor of love, and about working in the name of love under increasingly precarious conditions of work. At once a universal discourse, a recurring subject of inquiry, and a persisting theme of art—from Archaic Greek poet Sappho, to twentieth century Irish playwright George Bernard Shaw, to French philosopher and critic Roland Barthes, to American cultural critic bell hooks—love is as democratic as drawing. What’s Love Got to Do with It? is the full-museum exhibition of the third cycle of the Open Sessions program. The exhibition includes new artwork produced by all 31 participating artists, presenting diverse and radical approaches to the medium of drawing. Featuring works on paper, video, sculpture, as well as installation and mixed-media works, the exhibition will place contemporary drawing at the center of an evolving conversation about love. Organized by Rosario Gürraldes and Lisa Sigal, Open Sessions Curators.

From October 2018 through January 2020, Open Sessions presents six exhibitions organized by Rosario Gürraldes and Lisa Sigal, Open Sessions Curators, together with participating artists. Conceived and organized over fourteen months, The Lab exhibitions present experimental work and ideas, and take the form of thematic group shows. In the second year of the cycle, Open Sessions curators organize a full-museum exhibition to which all Open Sessions artists contribute work that best manifests and/or expands what drawing is.

OPEN SESSIONS

Open Sessions is an artist program organized by Rosario Güiraldes and Lisa Sigal, Open Sessions Curators. The two-year program provides opportunities for selected artists to find new approaches for contextualizing and exhibiting their work through conversation, public programs, and exhibitions. Drawing may or may not be the primary means of art-making for Open Sessions artists. Open Sessions fosters a dynamic, ever-evolving dialogue with new drawing practices and practitioners, viewing drawing as an activity rather than a product.

CREDITS

Open Sessions is made possible by the Horace W. Goldsmith Foundation, The Helen Frankenthaler Foundation, the Evelyn Toll Family Foundation, and, in part, by public funds from the New York City Department of Cultural Affairs, in partnership with the City Council.

ABOUT THE DRAWING CENTER

This Administration is dominated and directed by wealth and for the accumulation of wealth. It runs smoothly like a well-organized industry. Corporate wealth profits as never before in history.
